

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

Thursday, November 24th

This trip has been a mix of staying in cities or being somewhere with a lot of hiking. When I have a full day off it's easy to figure out what to do if I'm near a national park, but what do you do when you're in a big city where most everything is closed? You go to the beach!

Thankful the scooter got to see its first ocean! Pretty good for a little bike that grew up in Kansas.

I drove an indirect route out, winding my way through the mountains outside of Malibu. It was a fun drive, lots of curves and hills, although I dropped my speed significantly after finding a wash of dirt covering the road inside one turn. The rains had caused some flooding and it kept accumulating in the turns, which is super exciting. Eventually I arrived at my destination for the morning: El Matador State Beach.

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

El Matador State Beach

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

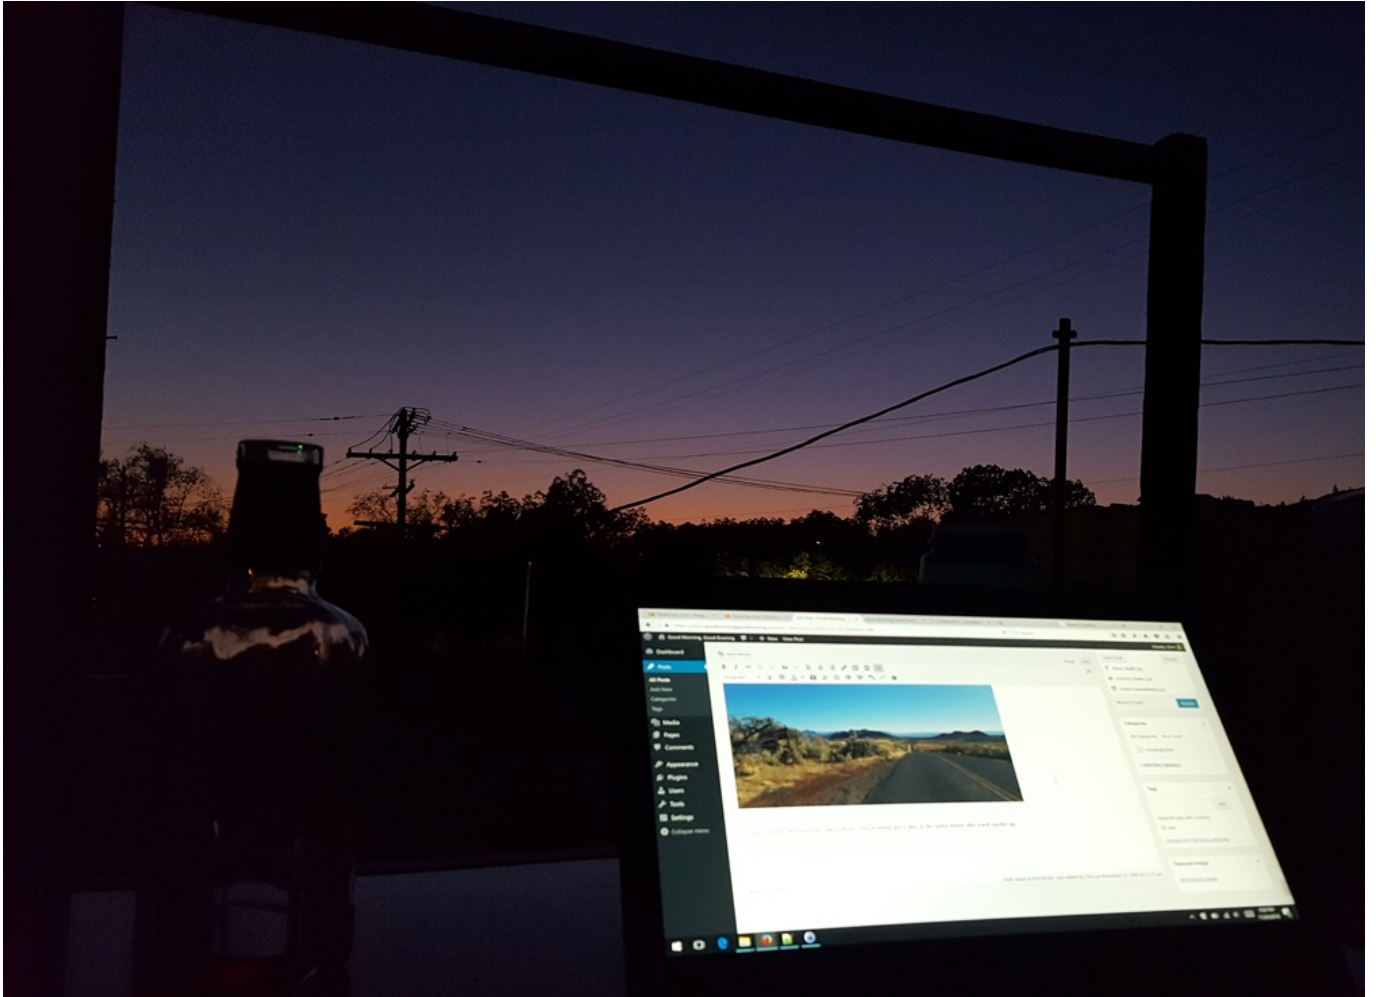

Unicorns

<https://www.goodmorninggoodevening.com/wp-content/uploads/2016/12/El-Matador-low-quality.mp4>

I spent a few hours at the beach and had a lovely time. Eventually my sunscreen was all burned off and I was ready to move on. I took the scooter north, following the famous “1” up the coast and then a bit inland for maybe an hour. I struck back overland, through the large sprawl and back into LA. I had some terrible Indian food (a tragedy!) and wound up on the porch enjoying the evening and catching up a bit on my eternally out of date blog entries.

Thanksgiving in LA: On the Beach

Sunset working conditions.