

Dear Readers, Observers and Confused Bystanders,

One of the interesting parts about writing from the road is the constant push/pull of spending time updating these missives to you (and our future selves) vs. going out and doing cool stuff. I'm already behind on updates and it's about to get a lot worse. I'm super excited because the cause of that involves me getting on a plane to visit Christy. I'll be in China for the next month, returning in early April. Maybe I'll have updates before then, but I wouldn't count on it.

Take care of one another,
Chris
